Silicon Valley Roundtable—February 2002 Meeting

Topic: The Current Economy: Fiscal and Monetary Effects of Policies and Trends

Roger Mack combines both the theory and practice of economics in his research and analysis of the current economy, including his perspective on fiscal and monetary effects of policies and trends. He will evaluate the relationship among economic policy, the current recession, and future recovery and will discuss likely directions for macroeconomic theory in the New Economy.

Speaker: Roger Mack, Chair of Economics, De Anza College and Alternative Decisions
Roger is a fifth generation San Francisco native and member of Economic Policy Institute, Stanford University, Silicon Valley Round Table, and National Association for Business Economics. He is widely published and lectures on the social impact of economic and political policy, futurism, the California and Santa Clara County economy, business forecasting, demographic and labor force changes, social-political trends, and experimental economics. By dividing his time between academics and business applications, Roger is able to provide a practical yet theoretical perspective on economic conditions.
